The Wild Robot

The Wild Robot tells the story of Roz, a robot who is unexpectedly activated on a remote island. Roz is the first robot to be in such a place and she has no idea how she ended up there. Her body is broken and damaged from the journey, and she must learn to survive alone in the wild. At first, Roz doesn't know how to do anything. She struggles to move, find food, and protect herself from the dangers of the island.

As time goes on, Roz begins to understand the world around her. She watches the animals and learns how they live. Slowly, she begins to copy their actions, learning how to build a shelter, find food and even take care of herself. However, her journey isn't easy. She faces many dangers, such as fierce storms and wild animals.

The other animals on the island are initially afraid of Roz because she is a robot. They have never seen anything like her before, and they don't trust her. But as Roz continues to help them, they start to understand that she is not a threat. She helps animals in need, like rescuing a bird from a dangerous situation and helping a fox find food. As she helps the animals, Roz starts to make friends and builds relationships with the creatures around her.

One of the most important things Roz learns is about motherhood. One day, Roz finds an abandoned egg. She takes the egg into her care, keeping it warm and safe. When the egg hatches, Roz becomes the mother of a baby gosling, which she names Brightbill. Roz is very protective of Brightbill and teaches him everything she has learned about the island. Through her journey as a mother, Roz discovers what it means to care for someone else and begins to feel more human.

The story of Roz is about survival, friendship, and the importance of learning from others. It shows that even a robot can change and grow when given the chance to learn and care for others.

26. What is Roz's main difficulty when she first arrives on the island?
    A) Finding a way to communicate with the animals.
    B) Figuring out how to take care of herself.
    C) Understanding the animals' behaviour.

27. Which challenges does Roz face while on the island?
    A) Protecting the animals from other robots.
    B) Adapting to the wild weather and dangerous creatures.
    C) Learning how to communicate with other robots.

28. How do the animals respond to Roz in the beginning?
    A) They try to help her repair herself.
    B) They ignore her completely.
    C) They are fearful and unsure of her intentions.

29. Why do the animals begin to trust Roz over time?
A) She helps them survive dangerous situations.
B) She teaches them how to build shelters.
C) She fixes all their problems with technology.

30. What is the significance of the egg Roz finds?
A) It symbolises her failure to understand nature.
B) It allows Roz to learn the value of patience and care.
C) It teaches Roz to build better shelters for the animals.
